

New survey on Atlanta Attitudes Toward Aging To Be Released Thursday, July 11

Wednesday, July 10, 2013 - 08:52am

WHAT:

On July 11, 2013 Pfizer and Generations United will release results of an inter-generational survey of Atlanta respondents attitudes towards aging. The “2013 Get Old Survey” reveals that Atlanta-area residents of all ages are concerned about their ability to get old the way they want, and feel their communities are not prepared to support an aging population.

AVAILABLE INTERVIEWS:

Deborah M. Whitley, PhD, MPH, Associate Professor, School of Social Work, Andrew Young School of Policy Studies, Georgia State University

Maureen Kelly, President, Thanks Mom and Dad Fund

Donna Butts, Executive Director of Generations United (advocacy organization for people of all ages)

Freda Lewis-Hall, Chief Medical Officer, Pfizer

WHY: Americans are living longer and aspire to live better than ever before. But living longer creates its own set of challenges that many of us still aren't dealing with. Many of the chronic conditions plaguing Americans can be prevented by taking charge of our health and living better. WHEN: Thursday, July 11, 2013

Pfizer Media: MacKay Jimeson 212.733.2324mackay.jimeson@pfizer.com or Local Media:
Clint Austin, OnTarget 404.277.0430clint@ontargetpa.com or Marty Klein, OnTarget
404.797.0022marty@ontargetpa.com