Sunday, January 30, 2011 - 10:40pm

"Her experience in delivering medicines in challenging markets is noteworthy, and she will play an important role in advancing Specialty Care's commitment to the eradication, remission and relief of serious diseases."

\(BUSINESS WIRE\)--Pfizer Inc. today announced that Dr. Yvonne Greenstreet has been appointed Senior Vice President and Head of Medicines Development for the Specialty Care Business Unit, effective February 1 2011.

Upon her arrival, she will assume global responsibility for leading the advancement of the development portfolio, ensuring its alignment with Specialty Care's strategic objectives.

"Yvonne has a strong track record of leadership and outstanding results during her career in the biopharmaceutical industry," said Geno Germano, president and general manager of Pfizer's Specialty Care Business Unit. "Her experience in delivering medicines in challenging markets is noteworthy, and she will play an important role in advancing Specialty Care's commitment to the eradication, remission and relief of serious diseases."

Dr. Greenstreet takes over for Dr. Michael Berelowitz, who is retiring after a distinguished 14-year career at Pfizer. She will report directly to Germano, and join his leadership team.

Dr. Greenstreet joins Pfizer after an 18-year career with GlaxoSmithKline (GSK), where she most recently was Senior Vice president and Chief of Strategy, Research and Development. Her work spans the R&D continuum, including clinical development, medical affairs, health economics, outcomes research, regulatory affairs and portfolio management. At GSK, she was responsible for leading the development of small molecules and biologics in several therapeutic areas, including musculoskeletal, immunology/inflammation, gastrointestinal, urology, ophthalmology and anti-infectives. She had also been responsible for clinical development and medical affairs for GSK's European business.

Before joining GSK, Dr. Greenstreet practiced medicine in the United Kingdom National Health Service and gained experience in medicine at a number of leading teaching hospitals in London. She holds a degree in medicine from the University of Leeds, UK, and an MBA from INSEAD, Fountainebleau, France.
